GYNAECOLOGY AND GENETICS CENTRE

Supported Freezing and Storage Programme for British Armed Forces

From 1st January 2008, Bridge will offer heavily supported egg and sperm freezing and storage to serving members of the British Armed Forces. These services will give all qualifying personnel the opportunity to make provision to preserve their fertility against possible risks of injury or death in ways they, their partners and families find appropriate.

'We hope this will provide a small measure of support and reassurance to a body of people whose contribution to our security and wellbeing is immense and often insufficiently recognised. We see others setting an example and hope by joining them to encourage more support for and greater awareness of the needs of the members of all three services. Military service is as tough and dangerous today as it has ever been and we are pleased to be able to contribute our specialist skills and expertise in this way.'

The special treatment and storage provisions will effectively halve the costs to Armed Forces personnel.
